THE FIRST STEP.

By their action Tuesday night the city school board has taken the first step toward the survey which should bring forth desired results and show what is the matter with the Janesville schools and how to best remedy any defects that exist. It is a step in the right direction and one which will bear results in the long run. It will take the actual responsibility for recommending radical changes from the shoulders of the school board and explain how these changes will result in the best good for the largest number. The cost of such a survey is not considerable when the benefits to be derived are to be considered as an asset. The Janesville public schools are one vast educational institution. They manufacture the citizens of tomorrow. Their finished product is in demand in years to come. If a survey of large manufacturing institutions is advisable to obtain the best results and more finished product at a less expense and under more sanitary conditions, why is it not doubly essential in the city schools whose product is of more real value to the world at large than a private corporation?

SIMPLICITY.

Governor Philipp took his oath of office for his second term as chief executive of the state with genuine Jeffersonian simplicity on the Saturday previous to January 1st. There was no long parade, no blast of bugles, marching of clubs, reception of citizens, decoration of the executive office and inaugural ball, merely the taking of the oath of office quietly and continuing the work he has so ably begun and to which the people of the state elected him to continue. In accordance with this is the statement published that the governor has spent but half the contingent fund allotted to him for extraordinary expenses during the two years and has paid all his own personal expenses during the past two years. As one former follower of the "tax-eaters" expressed it: "There is no man who has grown more up to the people of the state during the past two years than Governor Philipp. The people understand now he is a business man and is giving the state a business administration and that politics plays but a small part in his personal ambition."

COMPARISONS ODIOUS.

Comparisons are always odious, and particularly so at the present time when so much is being said relative to the military branch of the United States government and its apparent deficiency. The Chicago Tribune recently called attention to our deficiency in the following editorial: "Judging by the results of battles fought, the French army is more effective than the German, the German more effective than the Russian, the Russian more effective than the Austrian and Turkish, the Turkish more effective than the English. "American officers who have seen the English army at the front and in training agree that it is infinitely superior in training and administration to the American army in Texas. "Also Russian officers have said that the Japanese army is even better than the German. "How inevitable the catastrophe we face if California gets us into war with Japan before our present doddering military administration is changed."

MANY COMPLICATIONS.

The attitude of the allies in recognizing a new government in Turkey set up by a rebellious governor who favored their cause, and in Greece by the former premier who advocated that Greece throw its influence with them, will bring about new complications in the settlement of the present middle should an earnest desire for peace be expressed by both sides. Germany insists that the next overtures for peace must come from the allies and the other hand English statesmen announce that not until the last man and the last shilling are gone will peace come unless the allies are victorious. Truly, there seems to be a vast difference of opinion between the central powers and the allies. It is deplorable that some central ground can not be found upon which peace may be established, but when it does come how about these new mushroom governments—where will they stand?

The people who mail packages after Christmas, marked not to open until Christmas, on the theory that the recipient will think the postoffice held them back, indicates that some people have a very low opinion of the perceptible intelligence of their friends.

The metric system, as advocated by the Association for the Advancement of Science, would never do. It would be so easy that the study of arithmetic would no longer furnish the mental discipline needed by our youth.

When our militia commanders yell "charge on the enemy" the men bravely respond after sending around to forty-eight governors and state legislatures and getting everybody's approval.

President Wilson's birthday was no doubt celebrated by a large number of people who called to offer congratulations and incidentally to ask for a postoffice appointment.

War is sure a great game. You kill off several millions of your young men, burden several generations with a terrible debt and get just about what you had before.

The only trouble in locating the proposed new government pulp and paper mill will be that it can't be effective in carrying more than one congressional district.

Everyone is fretting over the income tax, the people over the exemption because they have to pay, and the people under the line because they don't.

Great indignation is expressed by some of our citizens at the unfairness of the income tax under which they will be called to pay $3.50.

There is so much complaint about the cost of shoeing horses nowadays, that it would seem cheaper to cut off one or two of their feet.

The kidslets are back at school after vacation, with nothing to incite their ambition except the fun of their next vacation.

The entente allies are splendid fighters with the typewriter.

The Daily Novelette

ALL ABOARD.

Oh, the crows were in the cornfield, Eating up the corn— The sheep were in the corral Waiting to be shorn.

—Van Horn.

Hi Holler, having plucked the potatoes and corralled the corn, took his annual day off and visited the city. The weather was putty darn hot, so he wore his light boots. In the morning, as usual, he had his pocket plucked, and in the afternoon he bought his yearly gold brick. "Well, I reckon that about winds up the day," he soliloquized, and, out of a penicillin from a bag, he made his way to the railroad station. "By gum!" he exclaimed, "if here ain't one of them them revolv'n squirts I've heard tell of. And in a railroad station, I swan!" And he stopped and looked at it real interested.

"Blame if the blame thing ain't goin' to blame fast I can't see the blame squirrel!" he chuckled. "Blame if I don't think I'll feed the critter a peanut!"

And he took a medium sized peanut out of the bag and inserted it between the wires.

"Ouch! Jtminee! Ouch! The critter went and bit me."

"Hey, Rub, called Montmorency Van Plush, a passing baggage smash'er, 'quit dat monkeyin' wid de electric fan!'"

FIVE MILTON BOYS PUT ON PROBATION

Minor Youngsters in Municipal Court. Judge Gives Them Chance Rather Than Reform School.

For the next thirty days Harold Emerson, Cecil Featherstone, Rex Hurley, Herbert Barnes and Walter Hudson, all between the ages of fifteen and seventeen, will have to walk the straight and narrow path in their home town of Milton. No more cigarettes, disobedience, late hours, nor any of the other characteristics which go to make Willie a bad boy must be entertained by them. If they are then the five are liable to terms of several years each at the reform school at Waukesha.

The quietest appeared before Judge Maxwell as an aftermath of the case wherein Alfred Davy, another youth from the village, was in court and sent to Waukesha as an incorrigible. Davy, the boys told, furnished evidence to "this den," a furnished residence, at the time unoccupied by the owners, who were away on a vacation trip. Considerable damage was done to the interior.

William A. McEwan of Milton, filed a petition with the court to determine the boys incorrigible. Judge Maxwell believed in giving them an opportunity to make good and so adjourned the case for thirty days, meanwhile the boys to show their real worth.

MONROE I. ARMFIELD DIES OF PARALYSIS

Former Proprietor of a Janesville Restaurant Dies in Beloit Hospital. Many Janesville people will be sorry to learn of the death of Monroe I. Armfield, which occurred yesterday afternoon at the Emergency hospital in Beloit. Mr. Armfield was stricken with paralysis a week ago and was removed to his home. On Sunday, however, his condition became so critical that he was removed to the hospital, where he steadily weakened until death came.

For many years Mr. Armfield conducted a restaurant in partnership with Perry Clark on the corner of Bluff and Milwaukee streets, where the Commercial club now stands. Previous to this he was employed in McDonald's cafe, before it moved to its present location. Mr. Armfield moved to Beloit about four years ago, where he had since been the proprietor of the Grand Avenue Cafe.

He is survived by his wife and two children, a daughter, Mrs. Anna, and a son, Bert, both of whom are in the service. He also has two brothers, Bert and Roy of Beloit, Wis.

CLOTHING THIEVES FINED BY MAXFIELD

Escape Penitentiary Sentence Because They Failed to Select a Costly Suit of Clothes.

Three Chicago youths, who have spent the past week in the Rock County Jail, listened to the old year run out and the new one rung in from behind the bars, left Janesville this morning sadder but wiser after a seizure was made on their charges of larceny of a suit of clothing from the T. J. Zeigler Clothing company, on Friday, December 29th. Two of them, who had given their names as Nolan and Ryan, were fined $35 each and the third, working under the non de plume of McAndrews, paid $25 and costs because he told the court he had been in trouble before, while the other two denied any previous police record.

That the three young men who were caught in the act of purloining the clothing by Joseph Connors, manager of the T. J. Zeigler company, and backed in a corner and held until the police arrived, escaped a state prison sentence is due to the fact that the value of the clothing they obtained was not of sufficient value to insure them a term at Waupun. Had they been a little bit more select in choosing their booty, they might now be on the road to Chester instead of returning home.

An interesting development not down on the court records occurred this morning when the three young men were arraigned, and one, who had been known as Tom Nolan, was identified by some young ladies in the city hall as "that perfectly swell Chicago chap who visited Lake Waubesa last summer and knew all the latest dances." The only difference was, he was known as Tom Bibbins then, and his friend was Tom Sheehan.

When asked about the circumstance Bibbins was flushed, then laughed, but stoutly maintained his name was not Tom Sheehan. However, the young ladies are sure they could not be mistaken. While the young men were fined instead of given a jail sentence, they were given a severe lecture by Judge Maxfield and advised to steer clear of the paths which they were treading in the future. Because McAndrews told the truth, and the judge was convinced the other two did not, when questioned about previous trouble, he was let off with a less fine than the others. Meanwhile the Chicago police are investigating the trio and interesting developments may arise on their arrival in the Windy City.

NEWS NOTES—MIDLAND
BY DAISSY DEAN

Marie Dressler, famed star of stage comedy, has formed a corporation for the production of a series which will be released during the next few months. The first twelve will be two-reel feature pictures based upon and under the title of "Tillie's Nightmare," the big Marie Dressler hit in which she achieved perhaps her greatest success on the speaking stage. These will be followed by a series of special feature productions starring a number of her famous artist friends from the fields of the opera and dramatic stage.

Miss Dressler was born in Canada and began her dramatic career in an amateur presentation. Her first New York appearance was in "The Robber of the Rhine" at the Fifth Avenue theatre in 1892. During the twenty-five years that have followed she has enjoyed a constantly increasing popularity.

SHE'LL SUCCEED, ANYWAY.
The biggest of the picture playwrights, among them Bayard Veiller, Irvin S. Cobb, Margaret Mayo, Edgar Selwyn and Roi Cooper Megee, are deciding what the first picture is to be for Miss Marsh. The young star, the first star of the pictures, is so versatile that it is hard to decide whether she figures best in comedy, tragedy or what not. The authors have viewed her work in "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," "The Escape" and "The Wharf Rat," and are trying to decide which expresses her art the best. But it is pretty safe to say that Mae will succeed in whatever they cast her, for she is a born and finished actress.

NEW COMEDIES.
"Social Pirates" is the title of the first of the weekly comedies to be released soon.

There are few funny movie comedies. The success of this producer in dramatic movies promises that this comedy series will be better than most. The exhibition of the new comedies will start Wednesday.

Another large feature production is nearing completion at the Los Angeles studios. This feature, directed by Colin Campbell, exposes the workings of a crime syndicate. The settings are very tasteful and elaborate.

NEW MYERS THEATRE.
An event of much interest is announced in the return engagement of the Jack Bessey stock company to this theatre on Sunday, Jan. 7, for a matinee and night performance only. Mr. Bessey will present and play the lead in Sarah Padden's great problem play, "The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row." It is a play that all who are engaged in the daily battle of life, whether in department stores, telephone exchanges or factories, or in any walk of daily life should see. The story is an appealing and pleasing one, a splendid love story holds the interest of both old and young and the comedy is of the clean and wholesome type. A splendid presentation is guaranteed, the name of Jack Bessey guarantees nothing but the best.

A theatrical visitor who will be most cordially welcomed is May Robson, who comes to the New Myers theatre Monday, Jan. 8, appearing in an elaborate production of the comedy in which she has achieved marked success, "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt." The story is an appealing and pleasing one, a splendid love story holds the interest of both old and young and the comedy is of the clean and wholesome type. ate, and the caste is said to be excellent, though the announcement does not mention the stars.

A motion picture mausoleum to cost a million dollars and endowed for a like amount for the preservation of historic photographs is planned by William Fox. A young Philadelphia architect, John Frederick Harbeson, has already been commissioned to proceed with the plans.

Harry Gates is serving as a special writer for George Beban. Mr. Gates is one of the most progressive of the industry's scenario writers and for two years was a most valued member of the staff.

Charles Richmond likes the pictures so well he doesn't care if he never returns to the spoken drama.

There are sudden transitions from humor to pathos and from pathos to humor. Smiles are turned into tears and then laughter again breaks out through the mists. The action is at all times brisk. One just sits back in his seat and enjoys it all, oblivious of the passing of time, the theatre and all and everything else, charmed by the consummate art of Miss Robson. Everything has been done to make the production noteworthy.

Is Yet to Come"KATINKA" PROVES TO BE POPULAR

Last Winter's New York Sensation Presented at New Myers Theatre Last Evening to Packed House.

Katinka, as a musical comedy, was mirthful, tuneful and gorgeous, eclipsing even the two previous successes of its authors, "The Firefly" and "High Jinks." Mr. Hauerbach is responsible for the bright and snappy lines, while Mr. First composed the musical score, during which one hit follows another in rapid succession, with the frequently recurring "Rackety Coo," which has a catchy lilt that hangs in the memory. Other notable musical numbers were "Vienna Girls," "In a Hurry," "One Who Will Understand," "Katinka," "Your Photo," "I Can Tell You the Way You Dance," "Dear," "I Want to Marry a Male Quarett," "Arthur Hammerstein is responsible for the staging of "Katinka." The plot of the play takes the audience through Russia, Turkey and Vienna, offers unusual opportunities in rich stage settings and unusual costumes.

The play tells the story of the little Russian maiden "Katinka," who is forced into marriage with the elderly statesman, Boris, whom she detests. Her lover, Ivan, discovers that Boris already has a wife living and, with the aid of the American, Hopper, he steals Katinka away on her wedding night. The remainder of the play deals with the search through Turkey and Austria for the first Mrs. Boris, which is finally crowned with success after numerous ludicrous complications.

Alto Ryan was a most dainty and pleasing Katinka, possessed of a beautiful, rich voice. She responded gracefully to a number of encores. Phil Ryley as Hopper was most amusing. Henri LaBette and John A. Crawford were seen as Ivan and Dmitri. Clara Palmer, long a favorite in Janesville, was a popular and popular. Her songs and dancing were very well received. The Bleimans gave some samples of Russian dances.

"K"

By Mary Roberts Rinehart

(Copyright, by McClure Publications, Inc.)

"What's the use of going back to that? It's over, isn't it?" Her objection made her determined. When at last she had yielded, and he made his way down to the smoking room, it was with the feeling that he had won a victory.

K. had been uneasy all that day; his ledgers irritated him. He had been sleeping badly since Sidney's announcement of her engagement. At five o'clock, when he left the office, he found Joe Drummond waiting outside on the pavement.

"Mother said you'd been up to see me a couple of times. I thought I'd come around."

K. looked at his watch.

"What do you say to a walk?"

"Not out in the country. I'm not as muscular as you are. I'll go about town for a half-hour or so."

Thus forestalled, K. found his subject hard to lead up to. But here again Joe met him more than half-way.

"Well, go on," he said, when they found themselves in the park; "I guess I know what you are going to say."

"I'm not going to preach, if you're expecting that. Ordinarily, if a man insists on making a fool of himself, I let him alone."

"Why make an exception of me?"

"One reason is that I happen to like you. The other reason is that, whether you admit it or not, you are acting like a young idiot, and are putting the responsibility on the shoulders of someone else."

"She is responsible, isn't she?"

"Not in the least. How old are you, Joe?"

"Twenty-three, almost."

"Exactly. You are a man, and you are acting like a bad boy. It's a disappointment to me. It's more than that to Sidney."

"Much she cares! She's going to marry Wilson, isn't she?"

"There is no announcement of any engagement."

"She is, and you know it. Well, she'll be happy—not! If I'd go to her tonight and tell her what I know, she'd never see him again."

The idea, thus born in his overwrought brain, obsessed him. He turned to it again and again. He was uneasy. He was not certain that the boy's statement had any basis in fact. His single determination was to save Sidney from any pain.

When Joe suddenly announced his inclination to go out into the country after all, he suspected a ruse to get rid of him, and insisted on going along. Joe consented grudgingly.

"Car's at Bailey's garage," he said suddenly. "I don't know when I'll get back."

"That won't matter. K's tone was cheerful. 'I'm not sleeping, anyhow.'"

That passed unnoticed until they were on the highway, with the car running smoothly between yellowing fields of wheat. Then:

"So you've got it too," he said. "We're a fine pair of fools. We'd be better off if I sent the car over a bank."

He gave the wheel a reckless twist, and Le Moyne called him to time.

They had supper at the White Springs hotel—not on the terrace, but in the little room where Carlotta and Wilson had taken their first meal together. Joe submitted with bad grace, but the man cheered and steeled him. K. found him more amenable to reason, and gaining his confidence, learned of his desire to leave the city.

"I'm stuck here," he said. "I'm the only one, and mother yells blue murder when I talk about it. I want to go to Cuba. My uncle owns a farm down there."

"Perhaps I can talk your mother over. I've been there."

Joe was all interest. His dilated pupils became more normal, his restless hands grew quiet. K's even voice, the picture he drew of life on the island, the stillness of the little hotel in its midweek dullness, seemed to quiet the boy's tortured nerves. He was nearer to peace than he had been for many days. But he smoked incessantly, lighting one cigarette from another.

At ten o'clock he left K. and went for the car. He paused for a moment, rather sheepishly, by K's chair.

"I'm feeling a lot better," he said. "I haven't got the hand around my head. You talk to mother."

That was the last K. saw of Joe Drummond until the next day.

CHAPTER XXI.

Carlotta had set the hour for meeting Wilson at nine, when the lure dusk of summer had fallen; and she found him then, smiling, a faintly perfumed white figure, slim and young, with a thrill in her voice that was only half assumed.

"It's very late," he complained. "Surely you are not going to be back at ten."

"I have special permission to be out late."

"Good!" And then, recollecting their new situation: "We have a lot to talk over. It will take time."

At the White Springs hotel they stopped to fill the gasoline tank of the car. Joe Drummond saw Wilson there, in the sheet-iron garage alongside of the road. The Wilson car was in the shadow. It did not occur to Joe that the white figure in the car was not Sidney. He went rather white, and stepped out of the zone of light. The influence of Le Moyne was still on him, however, and he went on quietly with what he was doing. But his hands shook as he filled the radiator. He afternoon under the trees, on this very road! Swift shame overtook him, that he should be here, that he had allowed Carlotta to remain in ignorance of how things really stood between them.

"I'm sorry, Carlotta. It's impossible. I'm engaged to marry someone else."

"Sidney Page?"—almost a whisper. "Yes."

He was ashamed at the way she took the news. If she had stormed or wept, he would have known what to do. But she sat still, not speaking.

"You must have expected it, sooner or later."

Still she made no reply. He thought she might faint, and looked at her anxiously. Her profile, indistinct beside him, looked white and drawn. But Carlotta was not fainting. She was making a desperate plan. If their escapade became known, it would end things between Sidney and him. She was sure of that. She needed time to think it out. It must become known without any apparent move on her part. If, for instance, she became ill, and was away from the hospital all night, that might answer. The thing would be investigated, and who knew?

The car turned in at Schwitters' road and drew up before the house. The narrow porch was filled with small tables, above which hung rows of electric lights inclosed in Japanese paper lanterns. Midweek, which had found the White Springs hotel almost deserted, saw Schwitters' crowded tables set out under the trees. Seeling the crowd, Wilson drove directly to the yard and parked his machine.

"No need of running any risk," he explained to the still figure beside him. "We can walk back and take a table under the trees, away from those infernal lanterns."

She recoiled a little as he helped her out.

"Not sick, are you?"

"I'm dizzy. I'm all right."

She looked white. He felt a stab of pity for her. She leaned rather heavily on him as they walked toward the house. The faint perfume that had almost intoxicated him, earlier, vaguely irritated him now.

At the rear of the house she shook off his arm and preceded him around the building. She chose the end of the porch as the place in which to drop, and went down like a stone.

There was a moderate excitement. The visitors at Schwitters' were too much engrossed with themselves to be much interested. She opened her eyes almost as soon as she fell—to forestall any tests; she was shrewd enough to know that Wilson would detect her malingering very quickly—and begged to be taken into the house.

"I feel very ill," she said, and her white face bore her out.

Schwitters and Wilson carried her in and up the stairs to one of the rooms. The little man was twittering with anxiety. He had a horror of knockout drops and the police. They laid her on the bed, her hat beside her; and Wilson, stripping down the long sleeve of her glove, felt her pulse.

"There's a doctor in the next town," said Schwitters. "I sent for him a while ago—my wife's not very well."

"I'm a doctor."

"Is it anything serious?"

"Nothing serious."

He closed the door behind the relieved figure of the landlord, and, going back to Carlotta, stood looking down at her.

"What did you mean by doing that? You were no more faint than I am."

She closed her eyes.

"I don't remember. Everything went black. The lanterns—"

He crossed the room deliberately and went out, closing the door behind him. He saw at once where he stood—in what danger. If she insisted that she was ill and unable to go back, there would be a fuss. The story would come out. Everything would be gone. Schwitters, of all places!

At the foot of the stairs, Schwitters pulled himself together. After all, the girl was only ill. There was nothing for the police. He looked at his watch. The doctor ought to be there by this time.

Another car. Perhaps it was the doctor. A young man edged his way into the hall and confronted him.

"Two people just arrived here. A man and a woman—in white. Where are they?"

"Upstairs—first bedroom to the right."

A STIFF NECK (No. 2)

A stiff neck, like many other things in this world, proves nothing, pro or con. You may say a stiff neck is the result of indiscretion. You can say "I told you so" about a stiff neck, as you can about anything else. But we say that stiff necks are very sneaking and are apt to slip up on the very best people.

Right here we might write a little morning prayer, except that there are perhaps too many of them already, and ask that as we all get older may we all become kinder towards people and less prone to blame them for the sad things (stiff necks, etc.) that befall them and less prone to say: "He brought it on himself."

Many things come and are not brought.

Man does not know what a lithe, limber, agile animal he is until he gets a stiff neck. He does not ever thank his stars he is not made out of wood.

After a man has had a stiff neck for three or four days and has had to turn his whole body around like a battleship, every time he wants to see to one side, he is a thankful creature if, when he gets well, he does not go around telling his neighbors that the human species is pretty well thought out, after all.

"There's the neck," he should go around saying. "We don't half appreciate our necks (our ordinary normal necks). Great things—the neck—adjustable—great labor saver—great convenience."

And he should make everybody he meets admit the neck is a GIFT and a BLESSING.

Dinner Stories

The following story was told by an officer stationed at Seaford. A rather simple looking young recruit was seemingly bewildered by the maze of cross-questioning he was being subjected to. Then came the question concerning the allotment of allowance.

"Next-of-kin?" asked the officer sharply.

The recruit dropped his voice and became confidential.

"I'm only wearing a vest, sir," he replied. "My shirt's at the wash."

Slang and its possibilities were vividly expressed in the conversation of two youths in a Back Bay home one night recently. The boys got into a discussion and when all legitimate arguments had been exhausted, the following repartee was heard:

"Snow again. I don't catch the drift."

"Keep on spouting, kid, you're a whale."

"The your shoe, your tongue's hanging out four days and has had to turn his whole body around like a battleship, every time he wants to see to one side, he is a thankful creature if, when he gets well, he does not go around telling his neighbors that the human species is pretty well thought out, after all."

"Two members of a prominent club met and chatted. Said one girl to the other: 'Is Bill Jenkins still paying attention to that red-headed Smith girl?' 'Not very much. They are married now.'"

GERMANY SHOWS DRINKING DECREASES MARKSMANSHIP.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Munich, Germany, Jan. 4.—Tests recently conducted by the Bavarian ministry of war upon the effect of alcohol on marksmanship were carried out by twenty marksmen on twenty test days, the total number of shots fired being over 30,000. The results showed, according to Prof. Dr. Kraepelin whose report on the subject is reprinted in the Military Weekly, an average falling off in marksmanship of about three per cent as the result of the consumption of forty grams of alcohol, corresponding roughly to the amount contained in a liter of beer. The effect was most perceptible twenty-five to thirty minutes after absorbing the alcohol. Most of the marksmen shot even worse than the average, several of them eight, ten and even twelve per cent worse. One of the amusing sidelights on the tests was that several of the riflemen insisted not only that they could not actually be shooting better after getting the spirits while in reality their marksmanship had fallen off as much as ten per cent.

FRENCH PAPER TELLS HOW SOLDIERS FARM.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Paris, Jan. 4.—The Bulletin Des Armes, official newspaper of the French, says 735 acres were farmed last autumn and spring of this year by one army corps. All this land is in the region of the Meuse in the immediate vicinity of the Germans. Oats, barley, potatoes and vegetables were grown, and besides 225 acres were worked for hay and preparations were made at the time the army corps was replaced to cut the grass on 150 acres remaining.

Farm material was made up of

Mother-Made, Quick Acting Cough Syrup

Should be Kept Handy in Every Home—Easily Prepared and Costs Little.

Missing, you'll never know what you are missing until you make up this inexpensive, quick-acting cough syrup and try it. The children love its pleasant taste and nothing else will loosen a cough or chest cold and heal the inflamed or swollen throat membranes with such ease and promptness. It's equally as good for grown-ups as for children.

This splendid cough syrup is made by pouring 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), into a pint bottle and adding the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50—a clear saving of $2.

The moment it touches the inflamed, cold-congested membranes that line the throat and air passages, the healing begins. The phlegm loosens, soreness leaves, cough spasms lessen and soon disappear altogether, thus ending a cough quicker than you ever thought possible. How wonderful! It's equally as good for the most stubborn and ordinary coughs as for the most severe. It's in 24 hours or less. Excellent for bronchitis, whooping cough, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma, winter coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over for its quick healing effect on the membranes.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PUNITIVE EXPEDITION COMMANDER HAS JOB FAR INTO MEXICO

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS] El Valle San Buena Ventura, Mexico, Jan. 4.—Responsibilities usually assumed by brigadier generals have fallen to the lot of Colonel W. H. Allaire of the Sixteenth infantry, present commander of this camp, the most southern of the American punitive expedition. Colonel Allaire, who is the only regimental commander of the ten who entered Mexico with the expedition last spring to retain his command, not only has his regiment and the camp, but heads the Eighth infantry brigade and directs maneuvers for one cavalry and two infantry regiments, several batteries of artillery, a company of engineers, a signal detachment and an aero squadron. Holding the most exposed part of the American line, the point Villa is expected to attack should he carry out threats he is reputed to have made.

against the expedition, the colonel not only has to keep out patrols but must direct the work of the intelligence department, the chief duty of which is to keep in touch with the bandit's movements. The task of keeping several thousand rebelled soldiers healthy and as contented as may be in this desolate spot also taxes his ingenuity to the utmost. A constant source of potential trouble is the town of El Valle, whose four thousand residents formerly were considered Villa sympathizers and where there now is a Carranza garrison. The town is less than two miles from the American camp and strict precautions must be taken to avoid clashes.
